

Dr. Orobosa Owie Biography

Dr. Orobosa Owie is a Professor of Healthcare Administration and Public Health, Human Capital Leadership Practitioner, Global Mentor, and Author of the book Be Bold, Be Confident, Be You- A Motivational Guidebook for Shattering the Fear Ceiling. As a former United Nations youth leader, Dr. Orobosa created and hosted programs and events to provide the next generation of emerging leaders with the essential tools, resources, and advice needed to succeed.

Impressed by her impact within the NYC Young Professionals community, Dr. Orobosa was invited by President Obama to be a part of a round table discussion at the White House in 2014 to discuss the launch of the administration's Mandela Washington Fellowship for Young African Leaders. In 2021, she became a Mandela Washington Fellowship for Young African Leadership Initiative recipient. As a Mandela Washington YALI recipient, Dr. Orobosa partnered with the U.S. Department of State to curate and host a 4-day career development conference that equipped 250 young women in Harare, Zimbabwe, with essential vocational and technical skills to acquire employment within the global workforce.

Dr. Orobosa is the Founder and Chief Executive Officer of For Health Scholars, an educational media and consultancy firm for healthcare professionals. She is also the founder of the Be Bold Foundation, a charitable organization that offers career and leadership development mentorship programs for young women and girls globally.

With a strong passion for instilling knowledge in professionals from all walks of life, Dr. Orobosa is also an Adjunct Faculty Member of the Department of Allied Health at Monroe College. As a faculty member, Dr. Orobosa teaches Healthcare Administration and Public Health courses and is a student mentor. During her academic pursuit, Dr. Orobosa has served as a program creator and guest lecturer at several ivy league institutions, including New York University, Columbia University, John Jay College, and the University of Benin in Edo State, Nigeria.

Dr. Orobosa is a firm believer in holistic leadership and community affairs. She is a former brand ambassador for the Small Business Development Center at Rutgers University and the immediate past director of the United Nations Association African Affairs Committee. Her mantra, "The power of effective change lies within each individual," stems from her work as a public speaker and global youth advocate. In 2007, she spent six months in Nigeria as a Youth Campaign Manager during the country's political elections. Her role was to ensure that the youth of her assigned constituency had equal and safe opportunities to exercise their right to vote.

Since then, Dr. Orobosa has become a highly sought-after servant leader featured on the Forbes Coaches Council and New Jersey Small Business Development Center Council at Rutgers University. Also, she has been endorsed by several prominent leaders and esteemed academic institutions, inclusive of New York State Senator Leroy Comrie, Former African Union Ambassador Antonio Tete, and Former Deputy Representative of Ghana William Awinador-Kanyirige, New York University, Columbia University, Baruch College, York College and the University of Benin. Dr. Orobosa continues to strive for greatness through her mission and commitment to transform communities globally by empowering emerging leaders to take action today to cultivate a better tomorrow.

Dr. Orobosa has a doctorate and master's degree in Health Administration from Capella University. She also graduated Cum laude and received her bachelor's degree in Health Administration from the City University of New York- Lehman College. Also, Dr. Orobosa has intensive training in management and leadership development. She has received certificates in organizational management, leadership development, performance, and quality improvement, understanding financial health systems, I.T. performance, and communication trends for business executives.

Contact Dr. Orobosa Owie

Email: oowie@orobosaowie.com

Website: www.orobosaowie.com

LinkedIn: Dr. Orobosa Owie